

Business Seniors Make Semifinals of Ethics Competition

Nathan Zahrt and Pete Arentson, seniors in the College of Business, qualified for the semifinals of the 2008 Eller

Ethics Case Competition, a prestigious national contest held October 23-25 at the University of Arizona.

The competition fielded 22 teams from many of the top-ranked undergraduate business schools in North America. It is designed to “expose students to a thought-provoking business ethics case that they could face in their professional careers.”

Participating teams are asked to analyze an ethics case, present their recommendations, and respond to questions from a panel of judges. The 2008 case asked teams to advise the governor of Arizona whether she should support re-opening a dormant copper mine, taking into consideration the impact on the environment and community. Zahrt and Arentson bested teams from Penn State University, the University of Minnesota, and Georgetown University to make the semifinals.

Zahrt graduated from the College of Business in December 2008 with degrees in finance and marketing. He is currently pursuing his MBA/JD in sports business at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Arentson is a senior in marketing. Marjory Christensen, a senior in marketing, provided research assistance and preparation for Zahrt and Arentson's presentation.

The College of Business sent a team to the competition for the second time in 2008, and for the second time the team qualified for the semifinals. A team from Concordia University in Quebec was the competition winner. ■

MOSMAN EARNS PRESTIGIOUS WALLACE E. BARON AWARD

Shellie Mosman, a senior accounting major from Carroll, Iowa, has been selected as a recipient of the ISU Alumni Association's Wallace E. Baron All-University Senior Award.

The award recognizes outstanding seniors who display high character, outstanding achievement in academics and university or community activities, and promise for continuing these exemplary qualities as alumni. Only five seniors were selected to receive the award in 2009.

Awardees receive recognition at two ceremonies on campus and also receive a complimentary Official Iowa

State women's basketball team. She is a recipient of the Cyclone High Scholar Athlete Award. She is currently the co-vice president of the Student Athlete Advisory Council, a member of the Athletics Advisory Council, and is a volunteer for alumni activities in the athletics department.

Mosman has a perfect 4.0 grade-point average and plays on the Iowa

Mosman has also volunteered extensively in nursing homes and elementary schools in Iowa, and is the volunteer director of VERB for kids, a program to encourage youth to stay active. She has also personally raised more than $5,000 for the Multiple Sclerosis Walk, and she raises funds each year and volunteers her time to create Thanksgiving baskets for the needy.

For her dedication, Mosman was named to the Big 12 Good Works Team, a group of the Big 12 Conference's most service-oriented student-athletes, in winter 2008.
